Chapter 1 by Story Wars

Few weeks ago, I woke to a horrible screaming. The sound so terrifying in its loudness, I'm not even sorry to say I covered beneath my bed. It was after that night, that things seemed to be, wrong.

The house was like any other, brick walls, sunlit windows and the occasional nosy neighbor, you know the usual. That was until that horrifying scream shook my house and my soul to the core. I have no recollection of any animal that could produce such a sound, that left me with the crazy thought, maybe it wasn't an animal!

I took it upon myself to buy a few camera's and laid them throughout my house in key positions. The stairs, inside my bedroom facing the door, the kitchen and then last the attic. I can assure you as I 'planted' my new additions, I did chuckle along the way, wondering what my family would think of me.

If only I could have known that I might not have the chance to see them again, I believe I would have acted more seriously. Hell, even moved out of the place!

So if you're watching this video, I would have said it to you ahead that you take what I'm about to tell and show you very seriously. The only way I can offer you as you smile and make fun of me is, leave!

Leave that house, climb into your car, stick a paper over your rearview mirror and get the fuck away!

Should you not heed my warning, I hope that what I leave, I guess you can call it my legacy, might help you survive.

One last thing before you continue, this creature, wants something. I cannot tell you what, only that it has something to do with our energy. It draws them to you. Remember this age-old warning: If you see them, They see you!

Good luck my friend, I hope you survive!
